Bridge schedule slips, may face delay past 1995

By Steve Marschke

Construction plans of the city's planned "Palamidessi Bridge" have again slipped. Unless two key issues are resolved soon, groundbreaking probably will not occur this year.

But the delay won't endanger $8.8 million in federal funds earmarked to pay for almost half the project, said City Manager Joe Goeden.

"There has been a rumor going around that we'll lose the federal money," he said. "That's not true. Construction has to begin by fall of next year. It's just that if we don't get the contract out (for construction) by Oct. 1, we'll lose the construction season."

The bridge is planned to connect presently-bare properties owned by the Port of Sacramento and Southport Industrial Park to Industrial Blvd., facilitating traffic to the Harbor Blvd. freeway interchange. Southport residents heading to the west part of town, or to Davis or the Bay Area, will also find the bridge of use.

But although engineering work on the bridge is nearly finished, said Goeden, two issues have stalled the project: finding financing, and negotiating for "right of way" land for the bridge to be deeded over by the Port.

"We're still in discussion with the Port," said Goeden. "There are some issues relating to their plans and to the allowed uses on their land. They feel they need to get the allowed uses settled (with the city) so they know what their land is worth before they give it up. We're saying, 'Give it to us now, and we'll use an arbitrator if we have to later to set a value.'"

The value of the land donated by the Port for the bridge would be credited towards the Port's "fair share" costs of the bridge and related infrastructure needed to open Southport for development.

Private developers such as the Southport Industrial Park expect to chip in for the bridge through a special "Mello-Roos" tax district, said Goeden, but most residential developers in Southport have pulled out of Mello-Roos discussions, at least for the first phase of funding.

So financing issues remain unresolved.

"One issue is how many players are willing to come to the table given the continuing economic downturn," said Goeden, citing the region's poor housing demand.

The city currently has a moratorium on new Southport development until a second barge canal crossing such as the Palamidessi Bridge is in place.

To neighbors, sewage plant site stinks

■ Homeowners in rural area of West Sacramento say noise, sight and smell of sewer plant would be a most unwelcome new neighbor

By Steve Marschke

A group of landowners in West Sacramento's Southport (southern half) region say the city has picked the wrong spot to drop a new, 141-acre sewage plant.

The new plant is designed to accommodate the sewage demands of the city's future growth, including the massive MacMillan Bloedel, Haindl Papier newsprint recycling plant. City officials have sited it at West Sacramento's lowest point, hoping to take advantage of "gravity feed" and avoid having to build an expensive pumping system to bring the city's wastes to the plant.

Unfortunately, say residents of the Gregory Rd. area of Southport, that site is practically in their back yard, at a spot near Gregory and Bevan, east of Jefferson Blvd., and well north of where the plant was planned for a year or two back.

"We have an unofficial group of about 60 or 70 people who live close to the actual (planned) sewer plant itself," said Sam Turner, one of the activists. "But only people who lived within 500 feet of the property got a notice telling them about the city hearing. Only 14 letters were mailed (by the city), but four people showed up at the hearing."

"We've found that even the planning commissioners were totally surprised that it was going in there."

Turner said he had asked a planning staff member a number of questions about the plant, most of which were answered with, "I don't know."

"Everything's total guesswork as far as the noise it's going to create, the height of the buildings, the light it will create, everything," he commented. "One house there now will be wrapped on three sides by the treatment a 100 foot buffer. But new development which hasn't been built yet will be graced by a full, 500 foot buffer, he added.

"They care more about the plant belongs in an industrial area, such as the Southport Industrial Park ("where prevailing winds will take the smell pretty much across the Port and over the industrial areas on the west end of West Capitol") or near the Unocal ammonia plant.

"A sewage treatment plant does not belong in a residential community," he stated.

Stephen Patek, the city's community development director, said his office has received "three or four" protests over the project, which he described as a well-buffered development.

"We still have to go to a public hearing," he added. "It will be a large plant that will have a large buffer. We still have to decide if that's where we want the plant."

LeFevre is running

By David Weller

After reading an article in last week's News Ledger stating that no Republicans have officially declared their candidacy for Vic Fazio's congressional seat, Tim LeFevre contacted the newspaper wanting to make sure we understood that he has not stopped running for the office since his defeat in November

"We announced the night of November 11 that we would keep going, and we have. We knew from the beginning that it would probably take two tries," he said.

LeFevre lost to Fazio by a 4 percent margin last year. The next time Fazio has to defend his seat is in November of 1996.

Bike lane deal OK'd

State officials and a local air pollution control agency have signed off on West Sacramento's proposed bike lane solution, ensuring about $62,000 in funding for bike lanes on West Capitol Ave.

The compromise includes dedicated, no-parking bike lanes on most of the thoroughfare, with a couple of zones in the city's business district where on-street parking will continue to be allowed.

The bike lane painting and installation project has just gone out to bid.

■ Cable TV provider says contract is open to negotiation, since company has received fewer subscribers than originally promised

By David Weller

A long-time contract dispute between Sonic Cable and the West Sacramento city government over public access policies will probably come to a head soon.

"We issued them a thirty day notice to cure two or three weeks ago. If they don't respond we will recommend a hearing with an arbitrator. We will probably be before the council with a recommendation sometime in September," said Assistant City Manager Carol Richardson.

Sonic Cable was awarded a contract to provide cable television services by the county Board of Supervisors in 1985.

'We issued them a thirty day notice to cure two or three weeks ago. If they don't respond, we will recommend a hearing with an arbitrator.'

Carol Richardson, Assistant City Manager

The contract included requirements that the company provide a public studio, training for people wanting to learn how to use the equipment, and an internship program for the schools.

When West Sacramento incorporated in 1987, the new city took responsibility for enforcing the terms of the contract, but the company has not complied.

"We had a lot of meetings with them. At one point we thought we were close, but that did not develop. We were real disappointed," said Richardson.

Richard Adams, General Manager of Sonic Cable's West Sacramento office, defended his company's public access policies and said that he considers the contract to be open for negotiation because the number of households subscribing to the service did not meet the number projected by the county in the original contract.

"We provide public access. We tape and air city meetings, and if someone wants a tape played, we play it. We have some studio space available at our office, but not as much as the city would like. At the request of individuals, we will also teach them how to use the equipment," he said.

Arguing that very few people in the city care about public access, Adams said that his dispute centers around the projected expense to subscribers.

"There is a dispute between the city and Sonic as to who will pay, and who will benefit. We don't think it's fair that all subscribers should pay two or three dollars for a service that very few people will benefit from. We have a right to pass on that expense to the customers," he said.

Like Richardson, Adams expressed disappointment that negotiations fell through a year ago. "Frankly we're getting tired of it. We had a good public access proposal on the table, but it fell through pretty suddenly," he said.

Adams could not say why negotiations fell through so suddenly when the two sides seemed so close.

Richardson remembers that they could not agree how the company would make up for past years of non-compliance.

Candidate X warms up for his run against Vic Fazio

Politics is funny.

In fact sometimes it makes me laugh out loud. One such time was the other day when I read about Richard Herrington, chairman of the California Republican Party, standing in front of Rep. Vic Fazio's office in Woodland announcing his party's "Kick Out Vic" campaign.

It seems the Republican National Committee is bankrolling a series of radio ads urging us to dump our incumbent Congressman in '96 and vote instead for a yet-to-be-announced Republican candidate.

I guess what they're saying is that anyone would be better than Fazio.

G. Gordon Liddy perhaps? O.J. Simpson? Stan Atkinson?

It may seem arrogant of the state and national GOP to be meddling so soon in our local Congressional race, without even offering up an alternative candidate. But things are not always as they seem.

The fact is, the Republican bosses have already handpicked a candidate to run against Fazio. They haven't announced it yet because they're still negotiating with the fellow's ex-wives, to avoid any embarrassing revelations that might surface in the heat of the race.

I happened to run into Candidate X the other night at an invitation-only cocktail party at the home of a wealthy rice grower in Woodland. He didn't realize I had my pocket tape recorder switched on, and although I could probably get in trouble for this, I'm going to share a bit of our conversation.

My Front Pages

By Ray Cushing

RC: What qualifies you to be a Congressman?

Candidate X: I'm not Vic Fazio.

RC: Besides that, what qualifies you to hold public office?

Candidate X: I'm a Republican.

RC: Do you have a background in government?

Candidate X: I have a background in business. The trouble with government today is it's run too much like government and not enough like a business.

RC: What's your campaign platform?

Candidate X: Fiscal responsibility, no more immigration, no more affirmative action.

RC: Aren't you concerned that last part won't play well with minority voters?

Candidate X: There aren't very many of them in this district.

RC: How long have you lived in this district?

Candidate X: Not long. I moved here from Orange County.

RC: Oh yes—the heartland of fiscal responsibility. What's your political philosophy?

Candidate X: I believe in less government and in the Christian values espoused by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

RC: Do you think that will play well with Hindu, Moslem and Jewish voters?

Candidate X: There aren't very many of them in this district.

RC: Am I right to assume you believe in prayer in public schools, outlawing abortion and taxpayer support for church-run schools?

Candidate X: Yup.

RC: Also capital punishment, elimination of the minimum wage and an end to welfare?

Candidate X: You got it.

RC: Also lower tax rates for the wealthy, mandatory sentences for pot smokers and raising the speed limit to 70 on interstate highways?

Candidate X: Uh-huh.

RC: I noticed you chatting with a few well-to-do individuals here tonight. How are the campaign contributions rolling in?

Candidate X: Not bad. Just between you and me, we have all the money we need to bury Fazio, from the national organization.

RC: You mean the Republican National Committee is financing your campaign here in Yolo and Sacramento County?

Candidate X: Yup. Newt's sick of Fazio. Wants him gone.

RC: So the radio spots, the TV ads, the direct-mail pieces are all paid for by the national committee?

Candidate X: That's right. We've got plenty of money to spend.

RC: Gee, it's nice to know the Republican National Committee cares so much about us folks back here in District 3.

That's where the tape ran out. I wish I could identify the mystery Republican candidate but I'm sworn to secrecy. Even if Candidate X doesn't make the final cut, though, chances are his views will be shared by whomever the Republican National Committee ultimately picks as their man to "Kick Out Vic."

An unexpected treasure grows from a grumpy morning

"T.J. Smoot" is the pen name of a neighbor of yours. His column appears every other week in the News-Ledger.

Last Monday morning I was in a rotten mood, and I was tired and cranky. As usual I to drive to Davis to pick up a package for Mrs. Smoot's business. I had argued against doing this in the past but found it futile to resist. Ms. S had pulled out a certified copy of our marriage contract, turned to page 16, and pointed with vigorous energy to Section 7, paragraph 25 which read, "The party of the first part (me) shall submit to requests by the party of the second part (Mrs.

T.J. Smoot

S) to make deliveries or pickups on a regular basis for the purpose of enterprise and/or entertainment and/or personal whim." Paragraph 32 read, "If the party of the first part aggrieves the party of the second part by breaching paragraph 25, the penalty for such transgression shall be a task of significant domicile maintenance, not to exceed 40 manhours." At the signing of the contract, I was amorously smitten and had neglected to read the last two volumes, trusting that true love had guided angels' fingers to pen the document.

So I mumbled out to the car half awake and drove down the street, struggling to find third gear. The trip was miserable. The sun glared through the streaked windshield, and I was again reminded of yet another task to do...someday. Then those negative "turkey tapes" incessantly began. "You didn't play enough with the kids last night. Your last article wasn't funny, and nobody understood it. The lawn needs mowing, and parts of it are brown." I was in a foul mood, and it seemed everyone on the freeway was either too slow or not sensitive to my needs. On the way back I stopped at the intersection of Road 99 and Covell Blvd. at the same time a huge construction truck pulled up in the lane perpendicular to me. Not in the mood to engage in Chip 'n Dale intersection mime talk, I sleepily gazed ahead, hoping the other guy would be in a hurry and zoom across the street. Seconds passed and shortly a muffled voice from across the intersection yelled, "BY ALL MEANS, I INSIST!!!!!!" The big galoot gallantly waved his burly arm in front of him, sarcastically beckoning me to pass. I was sure he would broadside me just for fun. So I zipped by not looking at him, thinking that if I did, he would toss his 32 oz. Big Mug Jug through my open window. Back on the freeway traffic was at a sluggish 68 mph all the way to West Sac, and the sun still revealed every smear on my windshield. More turkey tapes ran. "You'll be late again this morning. Your boss hates that. The other bosses hate that too. The other bosses hate your car. They know about your windshield."

Finally I pulled up to my house, and there was my toddler son at the door waiting to escape. I dreaded this encounter, thinking that unless I let him out, he would deliver one of his class nine howls which could scare any cat out of five lives. I envisioned myself chasing after my little Cherokee until he felt a need to reenter the house. I arrived at the door and found him biting at the bit, ready to meet the day. He wore his baggy pants, his sister's Pocahontas backpack, and his bike helmet on backwards with the straps swinging free. I watched him jog by me down the stairs with his battle face on, holding his hollow plastic bat in both hands like a marine hitting the beachhead. He met the Sycamore tree and whacked away at the trunk. Considering it sufficiently whacked, he turned to the Umbrella tree. The Chinese Pistache was next to be pummeled. He stopped, alertly glanced around, and spotted the bumper on our sedan. It was quickly introduced to bat whacks. The van was next and its bumper submitted to a merciless barrage of blows. Satisfied with life, he soon voluntarily padded back into the house.

I was reminded of a scene from the movie, "Never Cry Wolf," in which the wolf intently marked his territory. I realized my son was marking his territory. This was HIS front yard. Suddenly my mood softened, and I realized a memory was in the making. Years ago Mrs. S and I had carefully selected and planted those trees, and we warmly watched them grow into permanent fixtures in our front yard. They now grow in our hearts because of our tiny son's claim to them. If we ever leave West Sacramento, we will pack up this morning along with our other belongings, and in a way, a part of this river town will always remain with us.

Many volunteers and 400 trout help make Kiwanis camp a hit

From West Sacramento Kiwanis Club

The men and women of the West Sacramento Kiwanis Club returned July 29 from their 16th annual Kid's Camp, which was held at the Donner Mine Camp, Emigrant Gap. Fifty-five boys and girls, ages nine through eleven, were selected from this area with the help of local elementary schools and churches.

Since the first camp in 1980, the Kiwanis Club has hosted over 1200 youngsters to their camps. The club furnishes everything...sleeping bags, transportation, food, entertainment...there is no cost to the parents or guardians. This year, Kiwanis offered a special treat for the children. They were able to arrange with the Department of Fish and Game for the planting of 400 catchable trout in the river which runs through the camp.

Fishing for trout occupied most of the leisure afternoon hours...a "first" for most of the children. After everyone had caught at least one fish, the river became their swimming hole. Morning activities consisted of knot tying, matchless fire starting, first aid, hiking, arts and crafts, skit rehearsals, wooden top spinning, and athletic events. The evening ended with a camp fire program filled with skit performances, athletic awards, top spinning contests, and lots of singing. All campfires ended with the singing of the camp's special song, "No Man is an Island." Everyone gathers in a circle with hands clasped to sing this song, which personifies the theme of the camp.

In addition to the 20 Kiwanis members and their spouses who planned the entire program, provided the food and its preparation, invaluable assistance was received from River City High School students who served as counselors for the children. Their contribution to the success of the entire program was absolutely invaluable.

Kiwanis thanks the many merchants, individuals and organizations who have been so generous in their financial support which augments the cost of this project. Dick Gorman, camp director, announced that the 1994 camp was awarded honorable mention in world-wide competition with over 20,000 other Kiwanis clubs which submitted projects for judging. He also noted that many counselors have been children campers in previous years; which Kiwanis feels attests to the success of the program.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

A little more about the prostitution problem. . .

A man drives a car down West Capitol Ave., noting the single women who dot the street trying to make eye contact with male drivers. If he glances, they stop and turn, ready to talk if the car stops.

The same man crosses a supermarket parking lot in West Sacramento, by chance passing a skinny young woman dressed to attract attention.

She says "Hi," softly, out of earshot of those nearby.

He answers, "Hi," and moves on, avoiding the unwelcome business proposition which was invited. He hears a few more words behind him about "wanting to party."

A few days later, the same man pulls into a Merkley Ave.-area parking lot, past another skinny, drug using prostitute.

He stalls a moment before opening the door, not wishing to give the impression he parked there to talk to her.

He opens the door, and she says "Hi."

He answers and turns away, and hears her mumble something about "looking for a date?."

He responds, "No, but good luck," declining yet another prostitute's invitation, and wondering if something is in the air lately bearing a twisted relation to romance.

City manager Joe Goeden says the hordes of prostitutes on West Sacramento's streets aren't simply a symptom of the city not having enough cops.

There are about 30 known hookers who steadily live here, he said Tuesday, and "over a three month period, we arrested those 30 people 167 times. I could hire 15 more cops, and we could arrest them 350 more times, and they won't stop."

Part of the problem, of course, is that the prostitutes don't spend much time in jail, because there isn't enough room for "petty" criminals.

And, of course, much of the problem is linked to drug use problems and the availability of cheap lodging in West Sacramento's downtown.

All that together means solutions will be slow and difficult.

A photograph that, upon reflection, didn't make it into this newspaper (because it might have encouraged graffiti and vandalism):

The 'Cheaper!' folks installed a "Coming Soon!" sign on the site of their controversial proposed discount store near Linden South and Jefferson. "When Reason Overcomes Politics," the sign reads at the bottom.

Someone added some gang graffiti, which is not all that unusual.

Someone else oversprayed the sign with a couple of the circle-with-a-slash-through-it symbols, in obvious disagreement with Cheaper!'s plans.

Letters to the Editor

Defending Dave:

Regarding the article by someone named Ray Cushing in the August 9 News-Ledger, page 2, "A Not-So-Fond Farewell...", I must register a strong objection to his crude attack on attorney David Jones of Northern California Legal Services.

Hope Herr does a very good job in setting Cushing straight in her reply (August 16 News-Ledger "Letters to the Editor"). Mrs. Herr, you are to be highly commended for your knowledgeable letter.

David Jones has put forth great effort to assist low-income people who have come to him for help with their housing problems. Further, he is held in high esteem by those of us who were volunteers in the 1988 Michael Dukakis campaign for President here in West Sacramento. We observed his able and efficient organization of the campaign and the way he inspired enthusiasm in us workers.

Mr. Jones has received a prestigious fellowship to Washington. He was one of only 14 out of 40 individuals in the entire country picked for these fellowships. Applicants included people in the armed services, police and a wide range of other occupations who were interviewed for four days. This is a way of bringing in people to be a part of governmental operations for a year.

I hope we News-Ledger readers won't be subjected again to Ray Cushing's abusive and unprofessional type of journalism.

Come back, Daryl Fisher, wherever you are, and rescue your column!

Pondering parking

As we paint the curbs red and otherwise prohibit on-street parking, we should also offer alternatives to such parking-reduction moves by either:

1) Making it easier to provide more off-street parking -- such as wider driveways -- or;

2) Provide (more) bus stops at locations most severely affected, such as (a) apartment complexes displaying "visitors park outside" signs with limited or prohibited parking thereon, or (b) at our Washington Unified School District headquarters, located at 930 Westacre Road.

At this latter location during the regular school months, the on-street parking plus the filled-up off-street parking tells us that when school starts, we will see a shortage of parking spaces. The overflow may find relief in competing with residential and park ground parking to its south, west and north, but to provide for visitor parking, will W.U.S.D. have enough "surplus" parking spaces across the street at the elementary school? Or does W.U.S.D. have the money to relocate the fence and pave over the playground?

Would it not make more sense to re-establish the YoloBus stops at 930 Westacre Road? When the bus stops were taken out over a decade ago, the parking lot was less than half-occupied most of the time. But since it will overflow even more this coming year, it would seem timely to re-establish said bus stops. And while we're at it, why not locate said bus stops where they will benefit most from the afternoon shade of W.U.S.D.'s large shade trees? Also, this would be an opportune time to provide shelters -- at no cost to the public -- as is being done in Sacramento. If advertising cannot be allowed at that location, just take a couple of the most-recently installed shelters on West Capitol Avenue (without advertisements), relocate them to 930 Westacre Road and let the advertising folks place theirs on West Capitol Avenue. Such action would not only alleviate what will be a parking crunch, but will once again offer better access to 930 Westacre Road to those who do not drive vehicles.

It would also eliminate the "negative excitement" that drivers of YoloBus's #40 must contend with when newcomers discover there's no stop at such a logical location. On-street parking alternatives, anybody?

Statistics can lie

The "experts" are at it again. They have California cities rated as being poor places to live. Yuba City was dead last in one such

"study." How is this done? It's by manipulating numbers so that cities you want to come out on top are on top and cities that you want to be on the boom are on the bottom.

The system used is biased against metro areas that are near larger metro areas. For example, Yuba City doesn't need such facilities as a zoo or a large airport because they can use the nearby Sacramento facilities.

Thinking of adding to your home?

From the City of West Sacramento

You may be planning to add a room, modify the existing building or change the use of your building.

Before you spend time and money on any engineering consultation, it is advisable to talk to the following agencies: building division, 373-5822; planning division, 373-5854; and engineering division, 373-5854.

You can find out about various regulations, requirements prior to proceeding ahead with your project by contacting staff of above divisions. Sometimes the planning division issues have to be resolved prior to applying for a building permit. This procedure will help you get clear ideas about the sequence of steps required.

Handouts giving brief requirements and fees for all divisions are also available at the public counter of the community development department.

If your preliminary plans or change of use involves multiple issues with various departments, the city may schedule a meeting of the project review committee at your request. Requests received by noon on Friday with seven sets of plans will be heard the following Wednesday. The PRC will provide preliminary comments from all departments but it is not an in-depth review for the issuance of permits. This process is more likely to be helpful to applicants with commercial or industrial facilities but it is also available for residential projects.

So was I. Overweight, suffering from chronic fatigue, experiencing hair loss, anxiety resulting in heart palpitations, and poor diet attached to a high stress work environment, blah, blah, blah... (Sound familiar?)

Well, today I have lost over 50 lbs., I weigh what I did as a high school junior nearly 18 years ago, the hair loss has stopped, the heart problems have ceased, my diet has greatly improved, and I no longer experience the high stress in virtually the same line of business.

This may not work for everyone, but if you want to know how to get off the track to a short life-span and one that may add years to a more productive and healthier life, simply call (800) 836-9180. I will send you a free tape, and personally return your call.

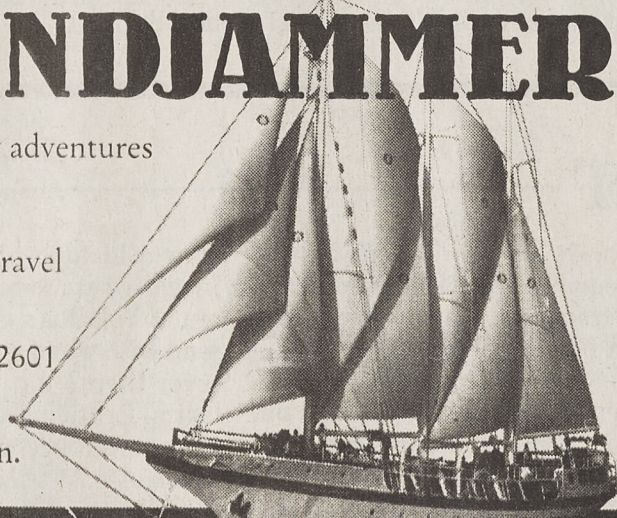

I wouldn't be offering this product to you if I hadn't used it for over 1 1/2 years and believed in it myself.

as the worst in the country. This is done by a number of tricks. First, a city can have rain, snow, sleet, tornados or hurricanes every day of the year and it doesn't matter because these characteristics are not considered important in climate ratings by them.

Another method used to distort climate ratings is to ignore cold weather. Forty below zero weather with the wind chill is considered "mild" weather by their system because they don't consider wind. Zero weather is rated "mild." Likewise, humidity, in comparing high temperatures, is not used. It was recently 129 degrees in Philadelphia on the temp-humidity index, but this is not mentioned on their rating system. Chicago, which recently had hundreds of human deaths and thousands of animal deaths from the heat, is rated by their system to have a "mild" climate.

And then there are ratings for recreational excellence of an area. Florida, Arizona, Nevada, California and Hawaii are more "Chinese" arithmetic. The cities that are rated to be "best" in this category are on the U.S. northern border: Helena, Montana and Sioux Falls, South Dakota. How? The outdoor recreational aspects of an area are not included -- just the indoor. Such things as per capita number of bowling alleys or movie houses or bars. Of course, where are you going to go on one of their long, cold winter days but go to such a place. I doubt if the residents of a city such as Las Vegas suffer a bit because they don't have enough bars or movie houses or bowling alleys.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of Oswald Paul Texel:

A PETITION has been filed by Douglas A. Kaplan, Public Administrator, in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

THE PETITION requests that Douglas A. Kaplan, Public Administrator, be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will follow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on September 8, 1995 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. Four, Room 200, located at 725 Court Street, Woodland, CA 95695.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

tonight at 6 p.m., commission members will hear a presentation on a proposed Yolo Economic Development Corporation.

The presentation will be made by Yolo County residents who have proposed establishing a private, non-profit corporation. The corporation would represent the economic development interests and needs of Yolo County and the incorporated cities of West Sacramento, Woodland, Davis and Winters.

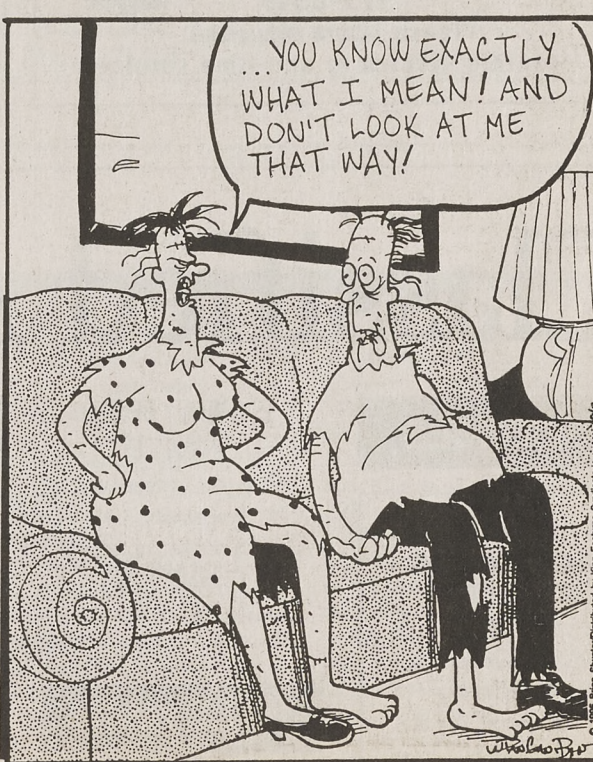

The proponents have suggested that the proposed Yolo Economic Development Corporation would enable the county's various entities to "speak with one voice" so that potential developers can better see the benefits of locating here. It would do this by serving as the county's primary information center. The proposed corporation's staff members would provide referrals, help develop grants for economic development, and promote regional tourism, according to announced plans.

West Sacramento's Redevelopment Agency and Chamber of Commerce are two local agencies which would work cooperatively with the new group, should it be established.

Those interested in learning more about the proposed corporation are invited to attend the meeting tonight, beginning at 6 p.m., in city council chambers, 2101 Stone Blvd.

the amount of $1,000.00 to the Kelly York Trust.

Donations can be sent to the Kelly York Trust in care of the Business and Professional Bank, 120 W. Court Street, Woodland, 95695.

Kelly has the thoughts and prayers of the West Sacramento Firefighters Association members for a speedy recovery.

Each year there are over 300,000 burn injuries throughout the United States, along with over 4,000 deaths. In 1994, deaths dropped to an 81-year low. The National Fire Protection Association reported that 4,275 people died in fires in 1994 this number does not include the numerous deaths to firefighters. That was a 7.8 percent decrease from 4,635 the previous year.

The West Sacramento Firefighters Association is an active supporter of The Firefighter Pacific Burn Institute. This institute is a local organization made up of firefighters from both Yolo and Sacramento counties. Over 800 firefighters donate monthly to the Burn Institute. The West Sacramento Firefighters Association is proud to be one of the first association to have a 100 percent participation in the Burn Institute.

On September 3, ten local firefighters will ride bicycles across the United States as a benefit for the Firefighters Pacific Burn Institute. The team will ride from Capitol to Capitol, beginning in Sacramento and ending in Washington, D.C. They will be visiting burn centers all across the country.
